Gov. Gretchen Whitmer has issued a shelter-in-place order for all Michigan residents in response to the COVID-19 on Monday.

The executive order asking people to stay home except for essential services will go into effect at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday. Under the order, people will be allowed to leave their homes under very limited circumstances. They also must adhere to social distancing measures recommended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"This is the only tool we have to fight it at the moment and support our health care system to respond is to give them the opportunity to respond," said Whitmer during a press conference. "The disease can't spread person-to-person if we're not out there."

Whitmer's shelter-in-place directive will ask the state's nearly 10 million residents to avoid all nonessential travel and to remain at home and will go at least for the next three weeks.
